i) Icarus, the son of Daedalus, was bestowed with wings that could make him fly. However, the wings were attached with wax to the main contraption. Daedalus warned his son to not go near the Sun (don't fly too high) or else the wax might melt. Icarus being over-ambitious ignored his father's warning and flew high. Hence the wax melted and he fell to his inevitable death. Similarly, the Patriot too was over-ambitious like Icarus and "leaped at the Sun" which thereby brought about his downfall.

He too wanted more power to please/help his people which therefore cause his downfall.

The Patriot met his end... brought to the 'Shambles' Gate or the scaffold's foot for his execution. Before his final breath, he believed had faith in God, who will reward him for his deeds and will give him his 'harvest' in the after life. Irony is seen here as the Patriot finds the afterlife (heaven) safer than Earth. He is quite optimistic despite nearing his death as he still has faith in God. He doesn't show any hate or malice towards the people. Pathetic Fallacy is seen as he walks in rain (depressing atmosphere). Another Antithesis is also seen while his hands are tied with a rope, representing the attitude of the people who once admired him and threw petals and myrtles in his path but now throw rocks at his face and wish to see him dead.

i) The athletes from several countries had gathered to participate in the Special Olympics and try their best to win the gold, silver and bronze medal. The 100 metre race of the Special Olympics was in progress.

ii) As the pistol exploded, it marked the beginning of the race. The nine athletes, who had spent 'several weeks and months' training themselves for this event were now putting their efforts, endurance and resilience to test. However, the youngest among them 'stumbled and staggered' and fell to the ground. The other athletes always had the chance to continue with their race and win the medals, however, they could empathize with their fellow sportsperson and through kindness and cooperation, they one by one came back and brought him to his feet. Together for this represents the Together, they walked together and reached the finish line. This represents the spirit of true sportsmanship and values of human values of empathy, kindness and cooperation. It truly was a 'Special Olympics' as it was an unexpected and amazing event which doesn't occur frequently.

The authorities appreciated the differently abled contestants' true spirit of sportsmanship and their show of true human values. Because each of the eight remaining athletes had a chance to <sup>ignore the taller athlete and</sup> ~~put aside their desire to win~~ <sup>win</sup> the race ~~but~~ they put aside their desire to win and helped their taller athlete cross the finish line together. They were all rewarded with a gold medal as they showed ~~their~~ that a sport should be ~~enough~~ enjoyed for its own sake, and ~~don't~~ depict winning or losing.
